Tomahawk trotters take to the field for run

An overcast sky and a reduced field of competitors did not put a damper on spirits at this year's Tomahawk Trail Trot, held at the local school grounds.

About 170 runners from Meridian Heights, Urmahia, Main Lake, Tomahawk, H.W. Pickup, Eldorado, Windfield, Lindale, Wabamun and Seba Beach took part in the event.

Running categories were for Grades 1-5, Grades 5-6, Grades 6-8, junior high, high school, staff and open. First place winners took home medals and ribbons went to second and third place finishers.

The trophy for the best participation went to Meridian Heights school with a total of 60 runners. Participation crests went to all the competitors.

"We were pleased with the way the event went," said organizer Dave Hatto.

"This year participation was strong, but next year we will stress the competitive aspect in the older age categories."

Hatto would like to see the trail trot expanded further. "I would like it to become the county cross-country competition."

"We have a good course here and could develop it further if necessary."

Last year about 900 runners took part in the trail trot.

Teachers reject latest offer

By Phil Cartwright

Teachers in the Yellowhead School Division have rejected a wage offer from the local school board and have requested that a provincial mediator step in to assist negotiations.

The recent offer was rejected by 96 per cent of the 180 teachers attending a contract meeting in Edson Oct. 16. The teachers also voted 87 per cent in favor of taking a strike vote.

The more than 300 teachers in the division, which includes Evansburg and Wilfrid, have been without a collective agreement since Dec. 31, 1989.

A mediator from the Department of Labor will meet with the groups Oct. 28 to Edson in an attempt to reach a settlement and avoid strike action.

The disagreement between teachers and the school division is a salary increase. Alberta

Teachers Association negotiator Charles Hyman said. In their latest offer, the board proposed a wage freeze in 1994 and an average increase of three per cent for 1993 (two per cent January 1 and one per cent September 1).

But teachers in Yellowhead are looking for an agreement similar to those in the North Central West Area, Hinton and Edmonton districts. Hyman said adding agreements in those areas were finalized about this time last year.

Although the two groups have made tentative agreements on some issues, "the board insists on a no salary increase for 1994," he said. That proposal could mean a loss of between $300 and $1,000 in one year for a teacher at the maximum earning level compared to agreements in surrounding divisions.

Halloween party set for youngsters

Goblins and games will be in full swing at the Rec Plex Halloween night when a special party for kids will be sponsored by the town of Drayton Valley.

The party will run from 6:30-8:30 p.m. and is for one to 12-year-olds with an admission fee of $3 per child.

Those attending must register at the town recreation office with the deadline Oct. 18.

Coordinator Joanne Foster said the Halloween get together will have a "carnival theme" with games, apple bobbing, fortune telling, a fish pond, a haunted house and best costume contests.

"We're having it to provide a safe, fun time for our kids on Halloween," she explained, noting it was an event a group of local parents staged two years ago that proved successful.

"The kids that attended the party two years ago really enjoyed it although it was hard for them to decide to give up trick or treating from door-to-door."

However, Foster pointed out the sweet aspect of Halloween will not be forgotten.

"There'll be lots of candies for the kids so they'll still get their treats as well as having a fantastic time without getting cold," she said.

Local schools have already received notices regarding the scheduled party and Foster expects at least 500 participants.

But although there is a entry fee she said it will not make ends meet and donations are welcome.

"If we could get help from the community, we would certainly appreciate it. That $3 is not going to cover everything we need."

Anyone interested in contributing or helping with any aspect of the party can call Foster or the town recreation office at 544-5057.

"Hopefully this will start something off on an annual basis," she said.

Entertainer earns ovation

By Carol Dietrich
A small but appreciative crowd gathered in the Room 100 at the Canadian Stage Theatre to see Connie Kaldor perform Oct. 12.

"And it didn't take long for the entertainer to warm up to the audience, as she kept the atmosphere light and comfortable."

"An audience is an audience," she said between sets. "It changes every night and each show has its dynamics."

"A small crowd like the one in Drayton Valley is usually more conservative. It's much harder for a comedian to make a name for herself. You have to be sensitive to who you are playing for."

She had the crowd relaxed enough to join her in what she jokingly called "the dreaded folk sing-along" after playing several numbers on guitar and piano.

"The versatile artist describes her style of music as eclectic - brave new folk. I play to a lot of different crowds. That was a conscious decision."

"In a contemporary entertainer."

In the business for 26 years, she has seen her style change. "I used to do a lot more country music."

"Every musician changes. My style has improved."

"I chose to perform for a responsive audience. You have to give them what they want."

And obviously Kaldor did just that, as the local audience gave her a standing ovation at the close of the show and she came out to play one last song.

She is preparing for the release of her second album "Moonlight Groovy." Her first one, "One of These Days," sold very well for an independent album (15,000 copies) about three years ago.

She expects the follow-up record to get airplay on adult contemporary stations because "it is a pop album."

Kaldor had just finished playing in Toronto when she came to Drayton Valley and was on her way to Banff. She takes the traveling in stride.

But it's a profession she enjoys - especially the songwriting.

"I like that part of it (the business). It's important."

And her songs were well-received by the crowd as was her dynamic voice. She displayed an impressive range in both areas singing about the Wood River in her native Saskatchewan and then changing to a humorous tone with her song about Jerks ("Twit's a capital T").

Connie Kaldor has come far and will no doubt go a lot further.

The concert was sponsored by the Drayton Valley Library as a fundraising event.

"I thought it was a marvelous concert," said library board chairman Brian Minelly.

"But financially it wasn't a success. We were hoping to make $500-$600, but we didn't make anything."

Funds remaining in assistance program

With the future of the Business Rehabilitation Assistance Program (BRAP) uncertain, local eligible homeowners are being urged to apply for remaining 1984 funds.

About $25,000 is left in the federal program locally and only a few homeowners have applied.

The program offers grants of up to $5,000 to assist lower income families renovate their homes. The program has allocated about $200,000 locally since it was introduced here in 1979 under the Neighborhood Improvement Program.

But the program has been reinstated on a yearly basis and there has been no indication that it will be run again next year, Poloway said.

Allocated through the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corp., administrators must wait for the new federal budget to see if grant monies will be available in 1985.

To be eligible, applicants must have earned no more than $25,000 the previous year and own a home within a specific boundaries in town, Poloway said. The grants are available to homes more than seven years old.

Poloway also stressed that a person's age "has nothing to do with the grant."

The BRAP is not just for senior citizens, it's for any low income family living in town, Poloway said. The grants are available to homes more than seven years old.

Interested homeowners can contact Poloway at the town office.

Surprise party honors coach

Giving your time, effort and support to minor hockey for 10 years is more than cause for a show of appreciation. And the friends and family of long-time Drayton Valley resident Al Malloy did just that on Oct. 13 when they gathered for a surprise appreciation night in his honor.

About 200 people were in attendance at the Best Place to say "thank-you" to a man who has played a big role in the Drayton Valley Minor Hockey Association.

Malloy began coaching the Drayton Valley Minor All-Star team in 1973 and two years later the team became the Drayton Valley Minor All-Stars, sponsored by the company he has part ownership in.

The mile team, for boys ages 9-10, has been successful over the years, winning a championship in a Calgary tournament in 1979 and another one a year later in Hinton. At home, the all-star play against the three teams in the pee-wee house leagues.

The 46-year-old coach has had an interest in hockey for many years. "He played hockey when he was young and has always enjoyed working with children," said his wife Helen.

"I still skate with the boys and really enjoy getting out on the ice," she added.

"I started coaching to contribute to the community," said the veteran coach.

"It was an endeavor to help the youth of the community," he added. "And you just seem to roll from one year to the next."

Looking back on the years spent coaching, I have a lot to be grateful for. I have many fond memories of the teams and the boys on those teams."

Malloy was "surprised and elated" at the evening held in his honor.

"If I've made some boys' youthful years a little better, taught them respect, to think of only the best, to work only for the best and to accept only the best, then my time spent coaching has not been in vain."

Malloy was "surprised and elated" at the evening held in his honor.

Make it or break it
The gymnasium at St. Andrew's school was rocking with activity on Oct. 15-16 as 50 youngsters joined their hands at finger songs like the moon walk. The breakfast workshop, offered by the Powerhouse Further Education Council, was hosted by the Inner City Breakers' Crew from Edmonton. "If there is enough interest, we may have another workshop," said Powerhouse co-ordinator Jean Duckett.

Council replaces appointees

Starting November Drayton Valley hospital will no longer have appointed members from the general public on its board of directors.

At its Oct. 11 meeting, Drayton Valley town council voted in favor of replacing the two local appointees who sit on the board with two council members, once their terms expire at the end of this month.

Hospital board chairman Dale Warren and board vice-chairman Robert Long were appointed as town representatives last year, for one-year terms, following a decision not to hold elections for the positions.

The board is also made up of representatives from Improvement District 14, Parkland County and the executive director of the facility.

But Councillor Charlie Miner felt the local seats should be filled with council representatives, rather than citizens at large.

"I believe funding for hospitals from the provincial government are undergoing changes and believe it timely ahead the responsibility of funding will fall more on municipalities," he said.

"On this basis, I feel we need members of council to be board representatives."

Councillor Tom McGeer disagreed, saying there should be one public representative since most input is important, but was outvoted five to one on the matter.

Hospital chairman Dale Warren was surprised by the decision, having sat on the board for four years.

"The way it (the decision) was done was disappointing more than anything," he said.

"They (town council) didn't even ask us for our opinion."

However, Warren won't walk away from the hospital board with bitter feelings.

"I'm very happy with what I accomplished in the time that I was there. I think I did a lot of what I set out to do."

The second local board representative, Robert Long, said he was also a bit taken aback with the council council decision.

"I was just going to ask (council) to be taken on the board for two more years," he noted, adding he hadn't been notified of the upcoming change.

Long also felt having council members as the only representation on the hospital board may not be as effective as public appointees.

"I think one of the problems with having council members is that I can't think of anyone that I know of that would be interested in health care," he said.

"If you're not interested in health care, there's no point in being on the hospital board. I've always been interested in health care - that's the reason I figured I could do the most."

Long sat on the hospital board for four years, spent three years as a town councillor.

Opinions

Changing scenery

Soon this valley that houses the Brazeau River will be a snow-covered wonder. The trees that were a verdant green will be weighted down with snow and silent until winter's end. With the change of season also comes a change of attitude. The people that once came here to camp and fish will wait until summer is back to renew their activities.

Parent/teacher group supported

The formation of a parent/teacher organization in Drayton Valley can be a constructive force to improve our educational system.

With improved communication between the teachers and the parents as its goal the group deserves support. Schools are not what they were when most of us went to school. Great strides have been made in educational techniques in the past few years, ones which few of us really understand.

Parents can't be expected to keep up with the advances in education and a group which professes to improve communication between them and the teachers will be doing the community a service.

Teachers spend four years in training to become professional educators. Uninformed parents can't be expected to take those abilities entirely for granted and a little public relations on the part of the teachers would work towards playing minglings the parents might have over new teaching methods used with their children.

Volunteers worthy of special honors

A special event took place for Al Mallory Saturday night, but it was also a special event for Drayton Valley. About 200 people gave an appreciation dinner for the longtime hockey coach.

Rarely are our volunteers recognized for their contributions to the community. The fact that a group of individuals organized themselves to thank someone who has given his time and energy over a long period of time is gratifying.

Too often parents send their children to participate in various activities and expect someone else to foot the bill in terms of time and commitment. Not only is help rarely forthcoming, but too often the parents are demanding and offer criticism instead of appreciation.

Being a volunteer is unfortunately a thankless job, and there are more than one Al Mallory out there who continue to give for the good of the youngsters. It would be good to see some of the other contributors to the community receive thanks for their efforts, as well. Where would most of the parents be if it weren't for volunteers?

Editor's Notes

The Flames and Nordiques were on the English channel, which left us the French telecast. Unfortunately, she doesn't have cable and the signal is weak, so what we watched was mostly in black and white, with lots of snow. Of course it was worth it.

Things are looking up. In a recent poll, three out of four fans at our table in the White Bull professed their allegiance to the Habs. Perhaps Edith and I should start a fan club, so send in a letter or two if you're interested.

As a matter of fact I have to put a new crest on my Guy Lafleur jersey. The old one is worn out because so many people look at it.

Canadiens ready for season

Writing a column is an odd experience because you express your opinions, but almost never receive any feedback. In fact, people sometimes go out of their way to tell you they don't read your work. So, occasionally you get self-indulgent and ramble on about whatever strikes your fancy because so few people acknowledge what you write.

However, for anyone who reads this space on even a semi-regular basis, welcome back to the hockey season and know that it's good to be alive, and even better to be a Montreal Canadiens fan — something Edmonton Oilers' faithful are unable to comprehend.

Beware the faint of heart because Les Canadiens are coming back with a vengeance.

My hockey buddy, Edith Deby, and me, kicked off the season in fine style Saturday night as Les Canadiens triumphed over the Pittsburgh Penguins. It was just like old times.

Your Comment

Do you think the government should bring back capital punishment?

Yvonne Rhine
Drayton Valley

Yes. I don't believe in all this killing of police officers. Somebody's got to take matters in hand.

Enna Bernade
Warburg

I don't believe in it. To me it's revenge. I don't think it would stop murders, it never did before.

Rod Pangnass
Drayton Valley

Yes. There's been enough policemen killed. I think most people want it back.

Sheri Tannor
Drayton Valley

I really don't think it does a lot of good. I wouldn't want to be in the position of being the executioner. There may be a miscarriage of justice.

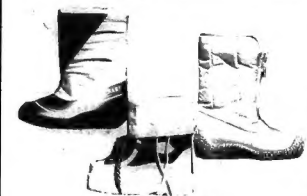

Karen Brunsley
Drayton Valley

Yes, because it will prevent murder. A lot of people want it back but others don't.

Local pedestrian hit by vehicle

A 34-year-old Drayton Valley woman has been released from hospital after she was struck by a car at about 9 p.m. on Oct. 14.

Katherine Louise Dalorne was walking east-bound on the 50 Ave. extension - Poplar Ridge Road when she was struck from behind by a station wagon driven by 55-year-old Leslie J. Broadbent of Buck Creek.

"Dalorne sustained minor injuries and was released from hospital," said Cpl. Chris Lee. "Our investigation is continuing and criminal charges are pending."

A dog was shot by two men at about 2 p.m. on Oct. 12 and local RCMP are requesting assistance in finding those responsible.

Edward Patrick, who lives 12 km northwest of Drayton Valley, observed two unknown males firing shots at his dog. Shortly after, the two suspects fled in a black or brown Cherokee or 4-wheel drive Jeep.

The dog suffered injury to both front legs and required medical attention.

A local hunter will go to trial on Dec. 12 after pleading not guilty to three wildlife and hunting charges in Breton provincial court last week.

Lorne Johnson faces charges of possession of a female moose, unlawfully hunting big game in female moose with a weapon other than an authorized bow and arrow and unlawfully hunting big game in female moose on Sunday.

The charges were pressed Sept. 21 by Fish and Wildlife officer Don Ostrychuk after the incident five days earlier in the Buck Creek area.

New park perfect for peace

Project worker Ben Rasmussen checks out one of the bridges that will be built for the new Breton park.

The trees stand gracefully, creating an air of peace as water bubbles beneath quiet wooden bridges in a spot perfect for quiet walks and relaxing.

And best of all, it's right in Breton - a new park built during the summer, through the Canada Works program.

Located at the river, the area was cleared of brush during the summer with bridges, picnic tables and fire pits installed.

Village administrator Carolyn Strand said the park was the brainchild of former alderman Charlie Close who passed away in July.

"He walked through the area and said if we could get a grant we should set up a project," explained Strand.

The work was the result of a job creation program through Employment and Immigration Canada, from June to September.

She said the government paid wages for four employees to work on the park, with Breton paying about $1,500 for materials.

Although the area mainly lends itself to relaxation, Strand said a spot has been set aside with dirt to be leveled for badminton or volleyball courts.

"It was basically a major clean-up of dead fallen trees and garbage," said Strand. "Now it's just a really lovely park."

This is the third park in Breton but Strand noted it is in no way a duplication of the others.

"This is more of a nature park, where with the other two parks one is more of a playground and one a ball park."

Strand has already noticed people taking advantage of the area even though it's just been completed.

Boys and girls teams victors

Evansburg hosts win

By Carol Dietrich

The home teams were just too strong for the rest of the competitors, as both the Evansburg boys and girls high school teams captured first place finishes at the annual Grand Trunk invitational volleyball tournament on Oct. 13.

Each of the eight girls and eight boys teams from Barrhead, Edmonton, Fort Saskatchewan, Grande Cache, Jasper, Sherwood Park and Drayton Valley, were guaranteed three matches in games.

The Drayton Valley Warriors came up against Evansburg in the final match after defeating Barrhead in a three-game semi-final match. But the host team easily took top honors, winning the games 10-0 and 10-0.

"There was nobody to compete with us," said Grand Trunk boys team coach and tournament organizer Don Zimmer.

"I thought we played with a great deal of intensity."

The Evansburg girls team played their Fort Saskatchewan opponents for the first place trophy.

The home team won the first game handily, but the last one was close at 16-15 for Evansburg," said Zimmer.

The girls team from Drayton Valley was knocked out of contention earlier in the day.

All-star teams of six players from both the boys and girls teams were chosen at the end of the tournament. "They are recognized as the top players. The officials chose them to acknowledge individual excellence."

David Boehm from Drayton Valley and Grand Trunk players Bruce Barry, Barry Barry, Clayton Lyphie and Anthony Spink made the boys all-star team. Drayton Valley player Shauna Tuckwood, and Dawn Donaldson and Caroline Babrowski both from Grand Trunk school were on the girls team as well.

"Last year the overall level of competition was stronger," said Zimmer. "This year there were some weaker teams, but many of them are rebuilding."

"I had problems getting teams because the University of Alberta has a tournament on the same weekend."

"Some stronger teams were invited, but they decided to go to the other tournament instead. I still managed to get the number of teams I wanted though."

Boys and girls teams victors

Evansburg hosts win

By Carol Dietrich

The home teams were just too strong for the rest of the competitors, as both the Evansburg boys and girls high school teams captured first place finishes at the annual Grand Trunk invitational volleyball tournament on Oct. 13.

Each of the eight girls and eight boys teams from Barrhead, Edmonton, Fort Saskatchewan, Grande Cache, Jasper, Sherwood Park and Drayton Valley, were guaranteed three matches in games.

The Drayton Valley Warriors came up against Evansburg in the final match after defeating Barrhead in a three-game semi-final match. But the host team easily took top honors, winning the games 10-0 and 10-0.

"There was nobody to compete with us," said Grand Trunk boys team coach and tournament organizer Don Zimmer.

"I thought we played with a great deal of intensity."

The Evansburg girls team played their Fort Saskatchewan opponents for the first place trophy.

The home team won the first game handily, but the last one was close at 16-15 for Evansburg," said Zimmer.

The girls team from Drayton Valley was knocked out of contention earlier in the day.

All-star teams of six players from both the boys and girls teams were chosen at the end of the tournament. "They are recognized as the top players. The officials chose them to acknowledge individual excellence."

David Boehm from Drayton Valley and Grand Trunk players Bruce Barry, Barry Barry, Clayton Lyphie and Anthony Spink made the boys all-star team. Drayton Valley player Shauna Tuckwood, and Dawn Donaldson and Caroline Babrowski both from Grand Trunk school were on the girls team as well.

"Last year the overall level of competition was stronger," said Zimmer. "This year there were some weaker teams, but many of them are rebuilding."

"I had problems getting teams because the University of Alberta has a tournament on the same weekend."

"Some stronger teams were invited, but they decided to go to the other tournament instead. I still managed to get the number of teams I wanted though."

Blades split Hinton series

By Phil Courtwell
The Drayton Valley Blades split the season's first exhibition games with the Hinton Cardinals last weekend, securing a victory here Friday and losing in Hinton Saturday.
The local Junior "B" club jumped to a 4-1 first period lead over last year's Central Alberta Junior Hockey League champions Friday night but could not hold on to the lead in the third to play in front of 257.
Hinton turned the tables Saturday, however, leaving the young Blades' team behind 10-4.
Regardless, new headcoach Lorne Poulin was optimistic about the team's future.
Emphasizing the positive aspects of both weekend games, Poulin said so far he's seen good and desire in this year's club.
"Everyone at the (Centennial Civic Arena) wants to put out our mistakes, but what do you expect for the first game of the year. It's normal," Poulin said.
"But what wasn't normal was the guys and desire we showed. If we want it, we can have a good club."
A line of concentration and playing in front of a home crowd for the first time this year contributed to the Cardinals scoring surge in the final period, Poulin added.
With only 13 players making the return trip to Hinton, the Blades simply tried out in the second period and were outplayed by the Cardinals, he said.

The Blades third and final exhibition game is tentatively scheduled this weekend against the league's newest team from Rocky Mountain House.

Minor start-up
With tryouts and the annual minor hockey draft now complete, local teams are preparing for league games at the Centennial Civic Arena. From tonight's games to Sunday, some 250 players will take to the ice on 16 teams. Here, a 10 West player goes for the puck during a match against the 10th Sunday. The two teams are 4-1.

60 participants, with classes available for youngsters, beginner adults, and advanced curlers.
Guidance is based on the Curl Canada instruction method and videos of local curlers will also be used during the courses.
"This will be the first year we've used videos," noted Hansen, pointing out they are an effective teaching tool.
Although lessons are scheduled for every night, with the exception of weekends and holidays, Hansen pointed out curlers don't have to attend each and every session.
"The first three nights are necessary but we realize it's almost impossible for most people to come every night, so after that it's fine if you attend at least every second day."

He said it normally takes a beginning curler about four days of instruction to deliver a rock correctly, and about twice that time for children.
There are no age restrictions for the curling school but Hansen said as far as youngsters go, success greatly depends on size, with a weight of about 90 pounds necessary for rock handling.
Registration for the school is at 7 p.m. Oct. 22 at the curling rink.
Participants are required to bring skates and push brooms rather than regular curling brooms, since Hansen said it makes it easier to teach sweeping technique with that type of broom.

Shift in education needed — Lougheed

By Sheila Pratt and Kathy Kerr
Premier Peter Lougheed called for a shift in education to stress basic core subjects and job training to prepare Alberta youth better to compete in a highly competitive marketplace.

Alberta students could see some major changes in their courses of study at high school as early as next year if the Tory caucus is persuasive this fall to the new directions outlined by Lougheed in a speech earlier this month.

Lougheed stressed he still sees as important a general, all-around education that includes the humanities. But new economic factors dictate the position should shift back to specific skills and competency in basic maths, sciences and language, said Lougheed.

Education Minister Dave King is preparing a major discussion paper on new directions in education that will be released later this fall.

Meanwhile, King stressed, Albertans have given their current education system top marks according to a Gallup poll commissioned by King and conducted last May.

King says he's pleased with the results of the poll which show 78 per cent of parents with school-age children felt their neighborhood school is doing a good job. That endorsement drops to 61 per cent when asked without children in school are included, but that's still almost two-thirds of those polled, King noted.

Despite the heavy-handed restraint on school grants in the past two years, the poll shows a substantial portion of Albertans (64 per cent) think the province is spending enough on education.

About 50 per cent of those polled say the spending is too high while only 11 per cent think the level of funding is too low. The province spends about $3,000 to $4,000 per pupil.

King says he has not yet decided whether grants to school boards will be increased in the next budget or whether they will remain frozen again as they were for this year. But he said he's advising school boards to plan on the basis of no grant increase as a starting point.

According to the poll, Albertans appear to support King's restraint-minded approach to school funding. About 44 per cent think the quality of education will not improve if funding were increased. About 36 per cent strongly favored holding the line as any tax increases and if more money is needed to maintain current standards it could be found by reducing teaching staff or taken from other government programs.

As for user-fee in education, twice as many people support them as oppose them as a method to help pay for textbook rental, vocational training supplies and extra-curricular activities.

King also said he was pleased with the overwhelming endorsement of his decision to reintroduce compulsory diploma exams for Grade 12 students. About 76 per cent of those polled said they felt the exams will make students try harder to get better academic results.

Improving communication important Parents begin new association

A small group of concerned parents have taken the first step in forming a parent/teacher organization in Drayton Valley.

About 18 local parents met Sept. 10 to set out the goals and objectives of the group, tentatively called the Drayton Valley Community and School Association.

The association is intended to improve communication between students, teachers and parents and act as an "umbrella" organization for similar groups already established at each school.

Specifically, the association's main objectives are first to "work as channels of communication between parents, teachers, principals, students and the school board and define the expected roles of each," and second, "to work together to raise the educational standards locally."

Keeping in regular contact with the schools is also an area of concern.

While McKinley admits principals and teachers might be "defensive" about the organization of such a group, "it's not going to harm in and tell principals how to run their schools. That's not the intent."

"It is touchy, and we'll have to make sure we follow certain steps," she said.

McKinley also intends to contact established community and school associations in the province for advice and guidance.

As an umbrella organization, the local group will help solve problems that are common among the different organizations working at each school, she added.

Along with improving public relations with schools and "consciousness raising" among parents, the association will provide support for parents that may be hesitant about approaching the schools with problems or concerns.

Currently, meetings will be held three times a year and plans for a telephone committee are underway.

Although Frank Maddock High School principal Richa Woods expressed some reservations about similar associations, he said a lot of constructive things can happen with such a group, including becoming an important resource group for a variety of school activities.

Amoco plant turns by-product into profit

By Debbie Henschel

If you've ever wondered where the propane you use comes from, chances are it's produced right here, with the help of Amoco Canada's Buck Creek fractionation plant.

The operation, which is the only one of its kind in the Drayton Valley area, located about seven kilometres east of Buck Creek, takes natural gas liquids which are by-products of oil drilling and separates them into propane, iso-butane, normal butane and pentane-plus.

To district foreman Roger Geertsen, this means conservation and profit from what was once simply burned up.

"Years ago we just flared it (natural gas liquids), now we conserve it," he explained.

And the process of transforming natural gas liquids into usable products has also become a money maker for Amoco which collects the by-products from oil wells and batteries from companies in the Pembina field to as far as Niton, about 70 km northwest of town.

"There is a profit but I couldn't even say how much," said Geertsen, noting keeping the $20 million facilities operable wouldn't be worth it if this wasn't so.

It was built in 1957 by Harry W. Bass of Dallas, Texas who formed Goliad Oil and Gas Company to build and operate the Pembina Gas Conversion Project.

In 1977 Amoco Canada, in partnership with Dams Petroleum, acquired the Canadian assets of Goliad, taking over operation of the plant.

The operation employs 10 full-time workers and runs 24 hours a day, processing an average daily input of 600 cubic meters of product.

The process begins when the gas is separated from the oil from producers at wells and battery sites throughout the field.

The gas is collected by Pembina gathering systems which lead to assay stations which separate the gas and natural gas liquids.

Gas is sold to Northwestern Utilities and natural gas liquids are piped to Amoco's fractionation plant.

Geertsen said liquids are separated through a series of towers, vessels and surge tanks through a pressurized heating and cooling system.

"It's more complex than an oil battery but similar to a gas plant operation."

Finished products are shipped by truck or tank car to such places as Quebec, Washington, Utah, and California and pipelined through a system connected to the Interprovincial Pipeline Network which terminates at Laramie.

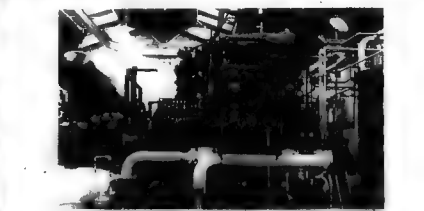

The propane, which most people are familiar with, is used as a heating fluid, normal butane used as cellulose in synthetic wool manufacturing, and iso-butane and pentane-plus used mainly by refineries for gasoline blending and upgrading.

Plant foreman Roger Geertsen points out the de-ethanizer tower, where ethane is removed when the gas mixture passes through.

The reflux pump helps cool the towers.

Amoco Canada's fractionation plant operates on a 24 hour basis.

The Haunted School
By H.W. Leitch

One cold winter day when I was off to school, I met my friend Louise. I asked her if she would walk to school with me. "Sure," said Louise. So off we went.

When we got there we went on the swings. First I asked her, then she pushed me. "Give the bumper rang and that's when the action began!"

First we had math. When Ms. Terry wrote the mathematics on the board something very weird happened. Instead of writing mathematics on the board, she wrote math on the board. "What is going on?" said Mr. Pearson. "What is the world is going on?" said Mr. Pearson.

"Well it all started when I wrote the Several points to the Illinois Industrial Park area were underdeveloped parts of the industrial corridor along the Elgin River. The Elgin River, which flows through the park, is heavily serviced but is only about "one-third" full.

"We're going to be attempting to redevelop the area in the Glowing Embankment area," says the Highway 60 District turn-off, Sewall adds.

The new track of the river is currently used by agricultural.

(Attracting tourists to the county would be another benefit.)

EDC, says Sewall.

The County Board of Parkland has one of the finest tourist potential west of Edmonton," Sewall noted.

Along with promoting Parkland County as a destination, EDC would like to see a regional committee formed as an offshoot of the EDC.

"We'd like to establish our own EDC and through that invite local municipalities to join in the development."

The regional committee would be made up of members from the towns of Bloey Plain, Spruce Grove and Wapiti.

A regional council would pursue major projects which would benefit the entire area, says Sewall.

He points to the massive container port.

"In the schools we have some room for more students and we have enough public works equipment and staff to handle an increase."

The additional assessment would help the existing residents and industries by either maintaining current taxes or even lowering them, he said.

While current provincial economic forecasts remain gloomy, Sewell believes Alberta's economy will begin some growth.

"I think the province of Alberta is going to see progressive levels of development and the County of Parkland should be making a move to capture its fair share," he said.

New season lined up

Drayton Valley Presents has prepared another season of musical entertainment but this year will now away from its opera format.

Offering its first show Oct. 27, the group has lined up performers ranging from a music theatre company from the Beaufort Centre School of Fine Arts to folk and bluegrass to a salsa troupe.

This year's shows will be held exclusively at the Rex Pats Theatre and the Westwind Motor Hotel, Drayton Valley. Presents President Mary Foley said, "we'll be no setting up chairs this season. We won't have to ask the audience to help clean up. It'll be a true evening out for our patrons."

The season will open with a holiday show Oct. 27 featuring the Holiday 12 Music Theatre Company from the Beaufort Centre. A six member touring company, Holiday 12's mainstage production is "Spoke Song" by Stewart Parker with music by Jimmy Kennedy.

"It's an Irish musical comedy where a fellow tries to put the world back on bicycles," Foley said, adding the company travels with a "mini-orchestra" as well as his own stage and lighting assembly.

The bonus show is open to all season ticket holders, although individual tickets will be sold.

The season premier coming on Nov. 9 will be "Alley Cats", an all female trio staging hits from the 1930s through to the contemporary. Mixing jazz, blues, Alley Cats performs Big Band era songs like "Alibi", "Misbehavin'", "Boogie Woogie", "Bugle Boy", through to the Beatles songs such as "Twelve in the Band" and "Let it be".

In the new year, Drayton Valley Presents offers Bill Bourne and Jim Morrison Jan. 19 in "Sweet Grass", a musical of folk and bluegrass music. Morrison appeared in Drayton Valley last year as part of the Star Rogers folk trio.

On Feb. 1, the Arts Mimes Troupe comes to town for their second performance here in three years.

The season's final show, scheduled for sometime in March, is tentatively a Broadway musical by the Alberta Opera Touring Company, which formed after the Edmonton Opera Touring Company folded last year.

"Spoke Song" by the Beaufort Centre's Holiday 12 will play Oct. 27.

Settler leads active life in new country

By Donna Hinkley

While still a young man in Denmark, Krist

Steffensen read a book about Canada, which he found so interesting that he decided to make a change.

And so it was that on July 27, 1927 at the age of 20 he left his farm home in Denmark in search of a better life in this land of opportunity.

He arrived in Quebec about Aug. 10 and caught a cattle train west.

Harvest had begun and Krist got a job on a farm near Ponoka. That fall he met Nils Stebbie who had a homestead at Buck Creek.

Stebbie invited Krist to come west with him to work in lumber camps over winter. The trip of course was made with horses and took four days.

Nights were spent in halfway houses along the way, where the price averaged about 75 cents for staples, lodging and breakfast.

In the spring Krist fled on his own piece of land, returning to Ponoka to work over summer and fall, then back to Buck Creek to work in logging camps over winter.

There were only about a half dozen settlers in the area at that time, Krist recalls.

In 1928 the hard times hit. What wasn't worth anything, so there were no jobs available so forms. He stayed on the homestead and cleared about 12 acres, cutting down trees with an axe and grubbing out the roots. A neighbor broke the land with horse and plow. In the fall he went back to work in the lumber camps for 185 a month. He did this for four or five years and got more land appendicitis. Had to take him to the hospital the next morning," Steffensen said. They never did know what was so funny.

During the Hungry Thirties the government made loans available to people wanting to get homesteads and people came from everywhere.

But eventually most became discouraged and left,

leaving the land for sale.

Krist and a neighbor, Buster Macdonald built a bridge west of Riverton. Buster had further to walk so he left his place about 4 a.m. By this time

Krist says the only money he spent on his first house was $1.50. That was for a window. Logs were held together with wooden pins.

In 1935 Krist married Ellen Stebbie, the daughter of a farmer he had worked for. She had lived all her life at Ponoka, which was a well-developed farming area, for the move to Buck

Creek with all of its bog and no roads was a real change.

The Steffensons felt it was time to get some cattle and when a neighbor had two cows for sale

Krist could only afford one. He had his pick and bought one for eight dollars. Later another farmer had four head of cattle and some chickens for sale, so Steffensen bought the works for $85. Now they were in business and could ship cream.

The mailman picked up the cream for twenty-five cents a can and delivered it to Riverton. From there it went to Hailtham. They received $3 to $2.50 for a five-gallon can. Ellen laughed saying, "Now we pay that for a pint of cream."

In the fall they would hitch up the horses and go to Buck Lake to pick up a large supply of groceries, but in between times the mailman would pick up essentials such as tobacco and matches.

Planes were also a big event and card parties were held in each others homes. "We had a good time. One fellow laughed so hard one night he got Embroidery has always been a part of Ben Wong's business.

Ten years ago, he and his wife, Yin Mi, started producing embroidered crests for Edmonton garment manufacturers.

In 1978, the company began manufacturing club jackets and gradually added new products. Today, Wong

Garment Industries Ltd. employs 25

Albertans and produces team and company jackets, coveralls, sport uniforms, track and sweat suits.

Since these garments carry crests, Ben had to upgrade his creating facilities to meet demand. Conventional lenders were unwilling to finance the purchase of a computerized, multi-head embroidery machine, so Ben talked to AOC.

AOC provided the financing because they saw how the loan could

New target set for mid-1985

Computer energy program reduced

The aim of a computerized energy program, originally proposed for eight local schools, has been scaled down, says assistant superintendent of schools, John Arnot.

County of Parkland high schools have now been targeted to receive the computers and energy saving systems by the middle of 1985, Arnot says.

So far, the county has accepted proposals from four companies to install the computer systems in the three high schools, Arnot said.

"A major savings can be found in larger schools where there is a peak demand for energy," says Arnot, who explains the three schools will be a pilot project.

"We'll see what savings there is and then look at installing the systems in other schools."

Installation of the computerized systems was recommended by an energy evaluation done by a consultant with the department of education last year. The study pointed out the county could save about $500,000 yearly on electric and water bills if the computerized system was installed in conjunction with a public awareness campaign.

Government funding should be available for the county to install the systems, Arnot says.

The policy should come back for final approval within the next two months.

Last month the school board passed a policy which details various energy saving techniques to be used by school personnel and students.

The policy should come back for final approval within the next two months.

County education program successful

The County of Leduc's academic-occupational program has received top marks from a team of educational evaluators who recently completed an assessment of the system.

The bottom line is that you have built a very good academic-occupational program in the County of Leduc," Verner Nyberg of the University of Alberta's department of educational psychology told a Sept. 25 joint meeting of the County and City school boards.

"I don't hesitate to refer calls to the County of Leduc — your program gets top marks," Nyberg lauded a team of researchers which included staff from Alberta Education and three county representatives. Their goal was to monitor the progress of about 100 students as part of a three-year study, which began in September 1981, into the effectiveness of the A-O program.

The county's two academic-occupational programs are located in Leduc and Warburg.

During the course of the study, county students were compared with pupils following a similar course in a similar school jurisdiction. The municipal district of Sturgeon's A-O program was chosen as the county's complement.

"Your program compares favorably with Sturgeon — they have a good program," suggested Nyberg, who commented positively on the program's teachers and staff.

"Your program is successful because of the people you have working at it. It doesn't matter how good it is unless you have people who can deliver," he said.

"With a program of this nature, a person has to believe in it — there has to be enthusiasm." The evaluation takes into account academic traditions as well as general attitudes and self-esteem.

A distinct difference between the Leduc and Sturgeon jurisdictions is in the handling of subject areas within the program.

Sturgeon follows the traditional approach of identifying specific classes, whereas Leduc sought to integrate its students.

The county's director of guidance and special education, Walter Coon, who joined Nyberg on the committee, explained that the county's A-O program brought together students under one project rather than departmental subjects, labelling them as mathematics or social studies.

"The achievement is clear — I was surprised to see it myself. The students got it," stated Nyberg, adding the A-O pupils achieve as much during the year as they would if they were enrolled in divided subjects.

A further difference is that the county-operated program accommodates youngsters with learning disabilities and mental handicaps whereas Sturgeon's only caters to students with learning disabilities.

"Program creditation was also discussed at the meeting with city trustee Joyce Asen identifying this issue as one which has drawn concern from some parents.

"There may be a movement toward crediting our program doesn't fit," said Coon. "We in fact parent this is an alternate and non-credited program — we get dollars because this program suits the children."

Coon told trustees provincial funding for the program will continue until June 1986.

"If you have something good, keep it going — don't let it slip away," suggested Nyberg. "You have a good program and you have to be careful not to make it a teacher program."

"A program like this is to be built for your own local needs; you have to decide what you want to do and do it."

Restraining orders sometimes the answer

Student Legal Services
University of Alberta

Restraining orders and peace bonds are court orders. They are intended to restrain one person from harassing or assaulting another.

They are most commonly used in the situation where a marriage or common law relationship has broken up. They may, however, be quite useful in other situations. They may not be the answer to every problem.

In order to obtain either of these orders you must be able to show that you are in fear of your safety. You will have to describe the behaviour of the other person that makes you fearful.

A restraining order is not available on its own. It is only available if you start a civil law suit such as by filing for a divorce, judicial separation, or matrimonial home possession order. In the case of a common law couple or other parties who are not married to each other the person wanting the order must start a civil action action. That is, you must start an action whereby you sue the other person for assault. Laying a criminal assault charge is not enough.

You will need to see a lawyer in order to obtain a restraining order.

You do not need a lawyer to obtain a peace bond. Peace bonds are available without having to start another action. However, peace bonds may take up to six weeks to obtain.

If you need a peace bond, go to the police station or to a justice of the peace and explain what you want. This is called laying an information.

A hearing date will be set. On that date both you and the other person will have an opportunity to tell your story to the judge.

The court will issue a restraining order or peace bond only if the court is convinced that your safety is endangered. A restraining order orders the person to stay away from you. A peace bond orders the person to keep the peace.

Once it is issued it is up to you to make sure the order is followed. How effective the order is will depend partly on you. That means calling the police immediately if the order is violated.

If you have a restraining order, it will do you no good if you invite the other person over to visit. In this case you are both violating the order.

If such orders are violated the person who violated them can be warned not to do it again, fined, or sent to jail.

Sometimes these orders are less than effective. They may not be able to make unreasonable people reasonable. Some alternative methods may be more effective.

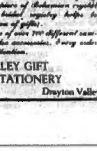

If you are being harassed by phone, then getting a private silent phone number may help.

It is a criminal offence to make abusive or obscene phone calls. The phone company will put a tracer on your phone if you request their help. The person can then be charged.

If you are harassed at home you may have to move and get a silent phone number so your address does not appear in the phone book.

Changing the locks on your home or apartment will help to keep unwanted visitors out. Moving to an apartment with a good security system is a good idea.

If you have been abused consider laying an assault charge. Be firm about this with the police. Statistics show that if this type of charge is laid the occurrence of physical abuse is reduced by half.

Construction on track Pool funding complete

Local taxpayers will not have to worry about the construction of Drayton Valley's new indoor swimming pool draining additional tax dollars in the new year.

Town recreation director Dennis Woolsey said funding for the $1.48 million complex has all been received, leaving the project "financially very stable."

"Technically, all donations that were proposed and could be received have been," noted Woolsey, adding that this remains to be about $45,000 in committed funds expected in January.

He said this puts about $1.5 million into the town's pocket, as exclusively for swimming pool construction.

Contributing to this figure is $200,000 received from Parkland County, $400,000 coming from the Major Cultural and Recreation grant, $800,000 in tax reserve dollars and local individual or business donations.

And with under three months before completion of the facility,

Woolsey said the town is "well within budget."

"I don't think we'll be in a situation where we'll have to raise taxes," he pointed out.

"As for the actual pool construction, Woolsey said the tank has been tented and drained and preparations are underway for tilting the area."

"You'll start seeing major finishing touches now."

This includes work on the deck, completion of the outside wave-run and once that's completed, work on the inside painting.

However, the facility will not start operation as expected in late December, but will be delayed two weeks because of soft conditions problems arising early in the construction process.

But Woolsey is not concerned with the later opening date.

"We want to have a quality project rather than place the emphasis on opening it up on time."

The Drayton Valley indoor swimming pool is expected to open in January.

Study to examine possibility of new county

Local officials are stunned by the provincial government's announcement that it will study the possibility of creating a new county in the Drayton Valley area.

"I don't know what brought this on," said Drayton Mayor Archie Grever when asked why the study was being done.

The department of municipal affairs has received a number of requests recently for a study, Grever added.

"We've had a few questions, made through the MHA (Municipal Affairs) about the feasibility of such a move," he explained.

Questions about forming a new county have also been brought to municipal affairs during the past few years.

"The idea's not new. It's been brought to our attention a number of times," Grever added.

Cripps, who championed the residents' requests to municipal affairs, says having the study done

"I suppose there are people in ID 14 who might move away with the Drayton Valley area and form a new county on their own."

Woolsey said he had no objection to the study, but he said he was not sure what the provincial government was looking for.

"I don't know what brought this on," said Drayton Mayor Archie Grever when asked why the study was being done.

"The idea's not new. It's been brought to our attention a number of times," Grever added.

Cripps, who championed the residents' requests to municipal affairs, says having the study done was part of her mandate as the Drayton Valley area representative.

"I don't know what brought this on," said Drayton Mayor Archie Grever when asked why the study was being done.

"We've had a few questions, made through the MHA (Municipal Affairs) about the feasibility of such a move," he explained.

Questions about forming a new county have also been brought to municipal affairs during the past few years.

"The idea's not new. It's been brought to our attention a number of times," Grever added.

Cripps, who championed the residents' requests to municipal affairs, says having the study done

"I suppose there are people in ID 14 who might move away with the Drayton Valley area and form a new county on their own."

Woolsey said he had no objection to the study, but he said he was not sure what the provincial government was looking for.

Wharfs Inside

By Phil Courtenay

A co-operative effort by the town recreation department and The Western Review is intended to improve communication between community groups and the newspaper's readership.

The newspaper has developed a written publication policy which will be distributed by the recreation board to some 110 clubs and groups operating locally.

Developed by managing editor Stuart Adams, the policy "sets down guidelines to improve and hopefully increase coverage for various organizations."

According to him, the written policy is the result of inquiries by the local recreation and culture board and follows similar presentations to schools and the community workshop held last month.

"It's our job to keep the community informed of the various activities in town and that includes the clubs and organizations."

"The only way we can provide this coverage is if we're not afraid to ask questions and the only way we know of an event is if we ask them (the organizations) or they tell us," Adams explained.

The recreation publication policy outlines the operation of The Western Review, its requirements and limitations, and stresses co-operation between community groups and newspaper staff.
